

'There is this place I go' was created under somewhat unusual circumstances for us. Stopped in our tracks by illness, a series of operations and a long recovery we decided that if we couldn't physically get out on the road to perform we would spend our energy writing and recording new songs. This CD is the result of that decision. It's easy to tell some of the songs were inspired by a fight for life while others were down the 'Sahara' path of observations and a desire for this world to become a better place for all.

The CD title 'There is this place I go' is taken from lyrics in the first song on this CD. Where this place is, is of course up to you. It may exist or it may be a place you create in your moments of meditation when you are in search of comfort, harmony and happiness.

We hope you enjoy listening to these songs. As with our previous releases we have included an instrumental track 'Eblana' which is the ancient name for the city of Dublin in which we were both born and raised. 'Where Angels Rest' could almost be considered an instrumental with Dave reciting a poem and the recorder musically expanding the theme. All that is left to say is we found the making of this album a true labour of love, totally therapeutic and if it has captured these feelings we are more than satisfied.
